Solved: Recovering forgotten Gmail password using LastPass and Google Chrome Jun 10, 2017 The solution depends on the app's programming and how it works, but one solution is to use the LastPass Firefox extension. How to recover lost Gmail password using LastPass and Firefox. Step 1 Click on the lock in the toolbar on the right. Step 2 Enter your Gmail username and password into the sign in box. Step 3 Select the recover button that appears at the bottom. Step 4 Let LastPass in your account and it should automatically bring up Gmail in the drop down list. LastPass can also be used to create different email accounts and websites for the same user. This way you can access all your accounts from the same location as the password is stored securely and privately in the cloud. Click on the desired account and enter the desired user name and email address in the boxes. You can set up LastPass with one click if you need to change the password of a Gmail account as there is no password option available to change it. In addition, LastPass also offers password generator apps for mobile and desktop devices. To access LastPass from any device with internet access just enter the URL: Caveat: Some info on this question has been tested on Firefox v17 and Chrome v62. Subscribe to our Newsletter

Fallen Chef Scott Andrew Hayes Dies of the Cut By Heather Davis October 1, 2009 When they all woke up Monday morning, one thing in their minds was certain: No one would be making a breakfast burrito on the morning of June 23. That morning, the staff of the new Cookie & Krebs restaurant in Over-the-Rhine had a less certain thing in mind: Where was Chef Scott Andrew Hayes, their beloved kitchen head who was to help them open their doors? Hayes, a former chef at India House, was missing after the now-shuttered restaurant was gutted by a fire Saturday evening. Crews found Hayes' body just inside the restaurant's entryway. An autopsy conducted Monday confirmed that he died of blunt force trauma. "Scott was a sweet guy and an amazing chef," said owner John Krebs in a news release issued Monday morning by city officials. "Our hearts are heavy today. We're feeling a little
