Here is the configuration: `gluon { ant { name 'build' } }` So now in my terminal i can run `ant build`. However when I run this command from my standalone jar I get the error: No configuration settings found: META-INF/gluon-tools.properties I'm not really understanding how this is supposed to work. I am assuming that the jar file is going to look at META-INF/gluon-tools.properties first. Any thoughts? Thanks! A: You should not put the ANT script in your jar, because it is interpreted by the user that first use your jar. You should put it in a files directory inside your jar and look the command in your main class : `gluon{ ant { name 'build' } }` And modify
