And it's interesting to see how some of our best and worst movies did in 2013. And while I'm not grading the films themselves, I am grading them on the relative success of their campaigns and marketing. This year, I think that a lot of the big Oscar-winning films were pretty well-marketed. But two of the biggest surprises of the year came in films that only got a few awards nominations. Brave, the critically acclaimed Disney animated film about a young Scottish girl who does battle against her family's tradition of “herding”, the 100th anniversary of the Armenian genocide, and the first national tour of Les Misérables, made quite a bit of money, and none of those movies generated much interest in their campaigns, so I’m not going to count them among the bests, although that doesn’t mean they weren’t very good movies. I’ll just say that at first glance, the marketing for those movies was extremely lackluster. 1. “Another Year” Also known as “Another Year” or “Annyong Banpyung” The first film to come out of this Korean “New Wave” which has been evolving into a full-blown genre, “Another Year” e79caf774b

Coronary artery disease (CAD) remains a major cause of morbidity and mortality worldwide. To examine the alteration of serum and plaque microRNAs of patients with CAD and their relationship, microRNA profiling was conducted in patients with CAD. Expression of microRNAs was analyzed in serum and carotid plaques of CAD patients by microarray and quantitative real-time PCR. Biological functions of aberrant microRNAs were investigated by Gene Ontology (GO), gene function and Kyoto Encyclopedia of Genes and Genomes (KEGG) pathway analyses. The data showed that the expression levels of microRNA-143 and microRNA-27a were significantly decreased in CAD patient serum. In carotid plaques, expression of microRNA-27a was significantly decreased, while microRNA-143 was increased compared with the control. GO and KEGG pathway analysis showed that, the target genes of aberrant microRNAs had been involved in several pathways, including the TGF-beta signaling pathway, ErbB signaling pathway, and MAPK signaling pathway. Aberrant microRNAs in serum and plaque of CAD patients may play important roles in the development and progression of CAD.Q: How to open a single page to a new tab in a browser, but maintain the session in the original tab?
