FIFA Ultimate Team™ players will also benefit from this technology, because this year their popularity has reached a whole new level. Did you know, for example, that players from the FIFA 20 Ultimate Team can now be selected as goalkeepers? This is only possible because of the improved motion capture system in FIFA Ultimate Team. This new tracking technology also powers the “Spiral Pass”, a new tackling tool that allows players to start contact immediately after running with the ball.

In addition, players now have the ability to perform “float tackles” using “Tension Tackle”. This allows “float tackles” to be applied automatically, even in dribbling situations, with no need to select the “Tension Tackle” button. “In the new FIFA 22 engine, the “HyperMotion Technology”, including the “Spiral Pass”, “Tension Tackle” and “Float Tackle” tools, alongside the “Gameplay Speed” tool used to increase situational intensity, will provide an additional layer of exciting new ways to play and master each new ball skill.” Alexander Hagman, FIFA Development Manager The new motion capture technology also extends to the brand new animation system for bodies, which makes the player models more detailed and accurate. The additional details include the expanded flexion flexibility, which provides more movement of the player’s limbs, while also decreasing load on the processor. “It’s a completely new, more lifelike animation system.” - Alexander Hagman, FIFA Development Manager The deep plant foot influences the way the player’s body is animated, as well as the increased functionality for hand animations. These animations have become more independent of each other, giving the player’s hands more priority for movement control. The new animation system has allowed us to introduce a higher level of precision and efficiency for the players’ movements, like more natural and flexible body bend and pose in free agency and free kicks. The improvements for the player models have also allowed us to create “Cockernote”. This is a new alert sound that players get to hear when one or more player models notices them. “Cockernote” also allows players to have a unique way to be introduced in the match, or to recognize a teammate on the pitch.
