I have a simple add() method on the People model which just adds a country to the collection. The problem is that the method is never called. If you only have one model, then the add() method can be called with a single

Here's my code: var Person = Backbone.Model.extend({ initialize: function(){ this.bind("add", this.onAdd, this); //this.bind("change", this.onChange, this); //this.bind("destroy", this.onDestroy, this); }, onAdd: function(){ console.log("ADD"); }, onChange: function(){ console.log("CHANGE"); }, onDestroy: function(){ console.log("DESTROY"); }, urlRoot: 'people', url: ':id', idAttribute: 'id', parse: function(attr){ return attr.id; }, toJSON: function(){ return "id"; } b7e8fdf5c8
