Ask HN: Do any HN users run a job board? - abhirami I have been doing a lot of job search lately and I think it'd be great if there is a way for a lot of HN users to post their jobs (hacking and non-hacking) here. I see there are job boards for coders/developers but I don't see any for those who wanna move to a different location to work.Do any HN users here have any idea what I am talking about? ====== StacyC MySpace has a job board. ------ itay I'd guess that there is a huge demand for non-hacking jobs. Lots of jobs require a lot of administration work, i.e. HR, Finance, etc. ------ aheilbut I'm sure there are. ST. PAUL, Minnesota (CNN) - Several members of the Westboro Baptist Church that's picketing the funerals of the victims of 9/11, said at least nine of their members had died as result of stress and poor health care, as well as the death of a member's infant child. "Nine of our members are dead," Shirley Phelps-Roper, one of Westboro's leaders

This has created a need to develop ways to increase capacity and speed of storage of information in devices. Flash memory is a particular type of non-volatile storage that is commonly used in mobile devices. Conventional flash memory stores each bit in an array of memory cells. Bits may be programmed or erased individually. Bits may also be read by powering memory cells with fixed voltages, such as 5 volts, and sensing the current drawn by the memory cells. However, as the density of flash cells increases and the width of memory cells decreases, the ability to sense the current drawn by memory cells decreases. As a result, data stored in a flash memory may be corrupted when the voltage on the memory cell is not sufficient to detect the current drawn by the memory cell.Send this page to someone via email The Winnipeg Jets beat their toughest opponent so far when they dropped a 2-0 series lead to the Los Angeles 0cc13bf012

Create a stunning tabletop with ourÂ .The present invention relates to the art of programmable logic devices (PLDs). It finds particular application in connection with implementing a reduced instruction set computer (RISC) on a PLD and will be described with reference thereto. However, it is to be appreciated that the invention is applicable to other integrated circuit environments and applications. Heretofore, a number of tools have been developed to reduce the amount of instruction code in an instruction set architecture. Typically, these tools make use of a number of available techniques including, for example, table lookup, instruction count reduction, use of registers that are not in use, prefixing instructions with a noop, replacing operations with single instructions, and logic flow reduction. The basic approach is to replace more complex instructions with less complex instructions where no performance penalty or adverse side-effects are experienced. Thus, logic may be reduced by having a series of operations that are always performed in pairs, such as a loop carry and a loop subtract operation, rather than a single operation that is performed in both cases, such as a double-accumulate loop. Reduction can be used to reduce the size of an instruction set as well as to improve the execution speed of the programming code. The pipeline of a RISC processor typically includes a decode stage, an instruction fetch stage, an instruction decode stage, a register read stage and an execution stage
