Follow @Tyler_Fischer2 Democratic Union of Hungarians in Romania The Democratic Union of Hungarians in Romania or Union Democratica Maghiară din România (, UDM) is a social-democratic political party in Romania representing the ethnic Hungarian minority. The party was formed in 2000 as a joint successor to the Social Democratic Party of Transylvania (SÖPT), whose leader Mihai Manea became President of Romania, but was disbanded in 2003 due to internal divisions. History The party first contested national elections in 2000 after winning two seats in the Chamber of Deputies. By 2002, however, its support was down to four seats. The following year it merged with the parties of the Hungarian Democratic Forum (UDM), Hungarian National Self-Government Party (MNSZ) and the Social Democratic Party of People from Transylvania (SSPDT) to form a single party, the Hungarian Coalition (KVM) in July 2003, of which the UDM is now the largest faction. On 24 May 2004, the UDM and the other members of the KVM decided to leave the Alliance of Liberals and Democrats (ALDE).
