The game was developed by real-world racing team R3C, and published by the Japanese arcade game publisher Namco in 2002, as a promotional item for their Namco System 12 arcade board. It was ported to the PlayStation 2 and GameCube later the same year, again by R3C. The game was only released in Japan. This game was also made by R3C using the Sega IGBX NFS system. The Sega IGBX system is widely considered to be the "Namco Mega Drive" (Sega Genesis). It is possible to play this game on the PC as well, by using a Sega Mega Drive as the third generation console and using a Genesis BIOS emulator like Hard Sub Zero. Gameplay The game's singleplayer mode consists of a game show in which the player has to race against a series of various vehicles. The game shows the player their opponent's vehicle and asks them what type of vehicle it is. Once the player determines the type of vehicle, they then have to race against that vehicle in a similar series of races. There are eight different vehicle classes and five locations. The various vehicle classes are: Police Cars Highway Cars Hot Wheels Sprinters Muscle Cars Ranch Cars T-Rex Trucks During the races there are four different section checkpoints, that must all be passed to win. Checkpoints 2, 3 and 4 must be passed in order to be given a winner's trophy, with the other in a similar fashion. The penalties for crashing between checkpoints are also similar. If the player was to fail on any one of the checkpoints, the player will have to restart from the last checkpoint passed. Each individual vehicle also has a set of colours to customize it. Multiplayer The game also supports multiplayer modes in which the player can race against other players online. There are two methods in which the player can play online: Versus and Session. Versus In Versus, a player can be given an opponent and can take on them in a race. If the player wins, then they get all the trophies in their trophy case. If the opponent wins, then there are penalties in which their trophies are also reduced. Session In Session, two players can play as
